SENATE TO ASK MORE DATA ON 4-POWER PACT

Pacific Treaty Negotiated by Arms Conference Assumes Important Place in Senate Affairs

HITCHCOCK RESOLUTION ASKS INFORMATION FROM PRESIDENT

Adoption of Resolution Agreed to After Discussion in Committee

WASHINGTON. — The four-power Pacific treaty which was negotiated at the Washington conference, again assumed Thursday a prominent place in senate affairs both on the senate floor and before the foreign relations committee.

Pending before the senate was the resolution of Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking democrat in committee, to ask President Harding to transmit to the senate additional information and documents relating to the treaty's negotiation.

Before the senate convened the foreign relations committee was called to resume consideration of the treaty. After a two-hour discussion adoption of the Hitchcock resolution asking further information on the treaty was virtually agreed to.

The resolution asking President Harding for full information regarding the negotiations of the four-power Pacific treaty was later adopted by the senate after a debate in which the arguments conference policies were discussed generally for the first time on the senate floor.

It is planned to wheel him to the gallows and strap him in a chair on the trap.

STOCKS AND MONEY PROPERTY OF TAYLOR REPORTED MISSING

Part of Estate Cannot be Located Declares Investigator for State

FURTHER QUESTIONING OF WITNESSES YIELDS LITTLE

Names of Persons Quizzed Withheld by District Attorney

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Oil stock and money, believed to have constituted part of the estate of William Desmond Taylor, slain film director, are missing, according to Charles A. Jones, investigator for the district attorney. Jones made this statement after checking up Taylor's personal papers and belongings, and then conferring with Mrs. R. M. Berger, an income tax expert, with whom Taylor is said to have discussed his 1921 income tax return.

From this it was learned that Taylor was prepared to pay a tax on securities and money which have not been located.

Further investigation into the slaying was planned Thursday. Thomas Lee Kachwala, district attorney, said witnesses would not, however, be summoned to his office, but would be questioned at their homes. It was believed publicly attending Taylor was to his office frightened persons into telling to themselves what might prove valuable clues.

Mark Sennott, prominent motion picture producer, was questioned on Wednesday. He talked freely and offered every assistance in helping to solve the mystery.

A number of other prominent people who heretofore have not been mentioned were quizzed by investigators. Their names were withheld.

MICHIGAN TO SPEND TEN MILLION UPON HIGHWAYS IN 1922

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—What Michigan proposes to do in road building during 1922 with an expenditure of $10,000,000 was described Thursday by Frank P. Rogers, addressing the annual conference of Michigan highway engineers here. The program for the current year, he said, calling for 672 miles of state trunk lines and 322 miles of federal aid roads. He told also of how it is proposed to expend the $10,000,000 five-year road building fund, authorized by the state legislature. The program permits bonding for $10,000,000 annually.

The remainder of the day's session was occupied with presentation by various county commissioners of the problems encountered in their districts. The council will close with a short session Friday.

TOLEDO MAN'S FEAT UNPARALLELED IN HISTORY OF BOWLING

TOLEDO, Ohio.—What is claimed as a record feat in bowling was the perfect score bowled by Sid Sherman of this city, in a match game here Wednesday night. Rolling one ball with his right hand and the next with his left, Sherman knocked down 12 straight strikes. He is normally right handed.

Officials of the American Bowling congress now here preparing for the "Terminal" tournament on Feb. 27, say they never heard of a like performance. Sherman is an opponent in the tournament.

SALES TAX ONLY FEASIBLE MEANS OF PROVIDING BONUS DECLARES HARDING LETTER

THE text of the president's letter, which was addressed to Chairman Fordney of the house ways and means committee follows:

"In accordance with the promise made to yourself and your assistants on the senate and house committees, charged with the responsibility of formulating proposed bonus legislation, I have carefully looked into the program of taxation, which has been suggested. In addition thereto, I have made inquiry into the possibility of issuing other short time treasury notes or long time bonds to meet the financial obligations which the proposed legislation will impose. It is not possible to commit to you either of the plan suggested.

Sales Tax Only Plan

"It continues to be my best judgment that any compensation legislation enacted at this time ought to carry with it the provisions for raising the needed revenues, and I find myself unable to suggest any commendable plan other than that of a general sales tax. Such a tax will distribute the cost of rewarding the ex-service men in such a manner that it will be borne by all the people whom they served, and does not commit the government to class imposition of taxes or the re-imposition of the burdens recently repudiated. The maintenance of which can be justified only by a great emergency.

"It is fully realized how great is the difficulty which confronts the congress in solving this difficult problem. I am aware of the strong sentiment in congress in favor of this adjusted compensation. I have spoken approvingly myself, always with the reservation that the bestowal shall be made when it may be done without such injury to the country as will nullify the benefits to the ex-service men themselves, which this expression of gratitude is designed to bestow.

"We have no serious problem in beginning the allotments of public lands and the immediate issue of paid up insurance. The real difficulty lies in the payment of the cash bonus. Rather than provide that the maximum cash payments shall extend over a period of 2 to 12 years, it would be a vastly better bestowal if we could avail the day when we may safely

STATE AND FEDERAL DRY AGENTS RAID OSHKOSH SALOONS

Evidence Secured Against Ten and Two Still Taken Wednesday

MADISON, Wis.—Federal and state prohibition agents together with the sheriff's force raided Oshkosh saloons late Wednesday, obtaining evidence against ten of the so-called "soft drink" purveyors and confiscating two large stills.

The largest number of agents yet used in a raid in Wisconsin co-operated to carry out the Oshkosh search. The earlier state prohibition commissioners' raid of nine men, with eight federal men and several sheriff's deputies were in the party that swooped down on the saloons.

SENATE COMMITTEE WOULD VISIT PLANT AT MUSCLE SHOALS

WASHINGTON.—The senate agricultural committee Thursday asked the senate in a resolution for authority to visit the Muscle Shoals power and nitrate project in connection with the committee's consideration of Henry Ford's offer to lease the properties. The resolution, which proposed that the whole committee of seven senators on the trip, was referred to the auditing committee because of the expenditures that would be entailed.

EXPECT DELAY OF THREE WEEKS IN GENOA CONFERENCE

LONDON.—By The Associated Press.—The probability of a delay of three weeks in the opening of the Genoa economic conference was concluded in British official circles Thursday. This was the first intimation in official circles that the French were likely to win their contention that it was impossible to start the conference on the date originally chosen, March 8.

PLAN TO MEET OPPOSITION IN BOTH HOUSES

Attitude of President Set Forth in Letter to Chairman of House Ways and Means Committee

CUT IN APPROPRIATION BILLS TO PROVIDE FUNDS IS SUGGESTED

Sales Tax Plan Has No Chance of Passing Belief in Congress Circles

WASHINGTON. — President Harding informed congress Thursday he considered a general sales tax the only feasible method of raising funds for a soldiers' bonus.

The executive in a letter addressed to Chairman Fordney of the house committee on ways and means suggested that unless congress saw fit to enact a sales tax passage of bonus legislation should be temporarily postponed.

"I believe," the president wrote, "the American people will accept the levy of a general sales tax to meet the proposed bonus payments, and we should contribute thereby, no added difficulties to the problems of readjustment. If congress will not adopt such a plan, it would be wise to let the legislation go over until there is a situation which will justify the large outlay."

Declaring that the government had under consideration the disposition of surplus war properties and other transactions which should bring about "great relief" to the treasury, the president said it would be wise to let the legislation go over if congress did not deem it advisable to adopt the sales tax.

Complicated Situation

The president's letter was regarded generally at the capitol as leaving the bonus situation even more complicated than before. Senate and house subcommittees were to meet late in the day to receive and consider the white house communication.

Then the sales tax was discussed in the subcommittee last week. It was understood that senators were informed that less than 100 republican votes in the house could be mustered for a sales tax, as a method of financing the adjusted compensation. Such a tax had been considered by house leaders as a possibility, but virtually had been discarded.

Cut Appropriation Bills

Among senators and representatives generally, there was private discussion and conjecture, with the revival on the house side of talk about a slashing of the annual appropriation bills as a means of providing the necessary finances for the bonus.

Representative Mondell, Wyoming, and some other leaders in the house, were understood to be giving this proposal close study. Mr. Mondell called at the white house early on Wednesday, but did not see the president. He said afterward that the supply measure would be examined carefully to determine whether much of the sum needed for the bonus could not be obtained from that direction.

May Slice Naval Bill

This proposition met with considerable response from the members of the house, where apparently there is growing desire to put the bonus measure through. There are suggestions that as result of the agreement for a naval holiday, as much as $300,000,000 could be cut from the naval bill and that another large sum could be saved by cutting down the size of the army.

Sales Tax in Disfavor

Some senators also thought that Mr. Harding might take such a suggestion but this belief did not appear to be general. Sentiment in both the house and senate against a sales tax was said to be so strong that there was little probability that the bonus bill with a provision for this tax could be passed.

Congressional leaders were understood to be without information Wednesday night as to when the president would communicate with Senator McCumber or whether his letter would contain suggestions that might assist congress in shaping its program.

TOLLERUD LIKELY TO APPEAL CASE; LIQUOR IS TESTED

Onalaska Avenue Saloon and Restaurant Keeper Changes Mind About Paying Fine

CLAIMS LIQUOR SEIZED IN HIS PLACE WOOD ALCOHOL

Raid Made by Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officers

GEORGE C. Tollerud, whose saloon and restaurant, at 1701 Onalaska avenue, was visited by federal prohibition agents on February 13, and who was arraigned in county court on February 14, charged with the possession and sale of intoxicating liquor, is likely to appeal the fine that was assessed against him by County Judge Brinkley. Tollerud pleaded guilty to having possession of liquor but denied that he was selling it. He was fined $200 and costs. He did not have the money with him at the time and the court gave him several days' grace in which to get the money together. The day after he pleaded guilty to one charge, the police department notified him that his license to sell non-intoxicating beverages was automatically revoked. It was then that Tollerud, through his lawyer, F. E. Wilkerson, decided to appeal his case.

When the federal agents and Sheriff Miller were at Tollerud's place they claim they saw Mrs. Tollerud empty the contents of a large beer glass in the sink in the kitchen of the lunchroom. Some of the liquid was left in the sink and this was recovered, spoonful at a time and put in a bottle.

The federal agents say it was moonshine. Tollerud claims that it was not moonshine whiskey but wood alcohol.

The bottle of liquid that was recovered has been sent to the state chemist for analysis. On the result of the chemist's analysis depends, probably, whether Tollerud will go through with his appeal, it is said.

DISORDERS IN BELFAST CAUSE MUCH ANXIETY

Fear Further Acts of Terror Before Anarchy is Put Down; Thirty-four Already Dead

CONTRADICTION STATEMENTS IN LONDON AROUSE SUSPICION

Only Three of Kidnapped Unionists Have Reached Homes Despite Report to Contrary

LONDON.—By The Associated Press.—Prediction that a coup d'etat in Ireland which resulted in the setting up of a Soviet republic would run Ireland's case for a century, was made by Winston Churchill, Secretary for the colonies, in moving in the house of commons Thursday the second reading of the Irish Free state bill. Such an occurrence was not at all likely however, in the opinion of the British government, he said.

LONDON.—By The Associated Press.—Michael Collins' return to Dublin after only twelve hours in London and his admission that he was not dissatisfied with the results of his conferences with government officials here are taken to mean that the British evacuation of South Ireland will be resumed forthwith, and continue uninterrupted.

This will relieve the situation of one of the most serious features. No official explanation of the assurances given Mr. Collins, however, has yet been made.

No troops have been moved from the south since Monday except 400 cavalrymen who embarked at Dublin for Liverpool Wednesday night. The other troops which arrived in Dublin on Monday are still there.

Suspicion Aroused

The suspicions aroused in Ireland by the suspension of the troop movement are reported to have been provoked by the contradictory statements in parliament of Lord Chancellor Birkenhead and Secretary for Colonies Churchill, the former, speaking in the house of lords, intimating that the halting of the evacuation was due to disorders in the south, while Mr. Churchill told the house of commons that it was in consequence of trouble in the north and detention of Mountain football players by Ulster authorities.

Mr. Churchill also announced that impartial commissions, each of which will include several British representatives and officers of opposing sides, are to investigate the facts of the border dispute.

ERSKINE DALE PIONEER

by JOHN FOX JR.

VIII
Next morning when the party started back to Red Oaks, Erskine felt a difference in the atmosphere that made him uneasy. Barbara alone seemed unchanged, and he was quick to see that she had not been told of the incident.

Have had made an explanation or excuse for his young friend, but he soon made up his mind that it would be wise to offer the best explanation:

That the lad knew no better, had not yet had chance to learn, and on the verge of impulse had acted just as he would have done among the Indians, whose code alone he knew.

The matter came to a head shortly after their arrival. The boy was standing behind the box-hedge near the steps and Barbara had just appeared in the doorway.

"Well, what's the trouble?" Colonel Dale asked.

"He tried to stab Grey unarmed and without warning," said Hugh shortly.

At the moment, the boy caught sight of Barbara. Her eyes, filled with scorn, met his in one long, steady, withering look, and she turned noiselessly back to the house.

He knew at last what he had done. Nothing was said to him when he came to the house and that night he secretly opened his lips. In silence he went to bed and next morning he was gone.

"He's hurt," said Dave, "and he's found home."

"Why, he'll starve."

"He could get there on roots and herbs and wild honey, but he'll have fresh meat every day. Still, I'll have to try to overtake him."

He went to get ready for the journey. Ten minutes later Hugh and Harry rushed joyously to his room.

"We're going with you!" they cried, and Dave was greatly pleased. An hour later all were ready, and at the last moment Pirely was led in, saddled and bridled and with a leading hater under his neck.

"Harry," said Colonel Dale, "carry your cousin my apologies and give him Pirely on condition that he ride him back some day. Tell him this house is his."—the speaker halted, but went on gravely and firmly—"whenever he pleases."

"And give him my love," said Barbara, holding back her tears.

At that hour the boy faced out in the wilderness ahead of him and looked a squirrel that was gnawing it to the bones. Soon he rose and at a trot sped on toward his home beyond the Cumberland. And with him etched with need on the steel of his brain, sped two images—Barbara's face as he just saw it and the face of young Dave Grey.

At sunset Dave knew that they were not far behind him, but when darkness hid the lad's tracks Dave stopped for the night.

Dave laughed aloud the next forenoon:

"He's seen us tracking him and he's doubled on us and is tracking us. I expect he's looking at us from somewhere around here."

He halted at the top of his voice, a war-whoop answered almost in their ears that made the blood leap in both boys. Even Dave wheeled with cocked rifle, and the lad stepped from behind a bush scarcely ten feet behind them.

"Well, by gum," shouted Dave, "foiled us, after all!"

A faint grin of triumph was on the lad's lips, but in his eyes was a waiting inquiry directed at Harry and Hugh. They sprang forward:

"We're sorry!"

On Pirely, Harry buckled the boy's saddle and motioned for him to climb up.

"He's your horse, cousin," said Harry. "My father sent him to you and says his home is yours whenever you please. And Barbara sent her love."

At almost the same hour in the great house on the James the old negro was carrying to Colonel a kindly deed that the lad had left behind him. It was a note scrawled on a sheet of paper, signed by the boy's Indian name and his Indian name—a buffalo plucked by an arrow.

"It make me laugh. I have no use. I give him dam' gladness!" Barbara.

Thus read the servant:

IX
Three days later they reached the broad, beautiful Holston river, pressing over the pine-crested white-rocked summit of Clinch Mountain, and came to the last bulwark fort of the western frontier. Next day they started on the long, long wilderness

What Students Don't Know

We are indebted to the Milwaukee Sentinel for the following summary of a questionnaire on current events conducted among high school students:

It is reported that the 20,000 students who took the test averaged only forty-six percent on a series of ten questions relating to baseball, football and the movies.
Thirty-five percent of the boys did not know who won the world's series; fifty percent could not give the total number of home runs achieved by Babe Ruth last season, and as for tennis, few knew anything at all about Mile. Leonien, the French champion who blew up so spectacularly in her American contests last summer. Several thought she was a French chemist and others advanced the opinion that she was a representative of Japan at the peace conference.

This is contrasted with a recent test in which matters of serious import were the basis of the questions. The scholars were asked to identify certain prominent men, to tell why they were famous, and asked other simple questions about the solid issues which fill the columns of the daily papers. They made a poor showing. The secretary of the Institute for Public Service, which conducted the quiz, said:

"It has cost from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 in money and time to educate the 1,000 high school seniors, 670 of whom did not know the meaning of 'the open shop.' Six hundred and ninety of them could not recognize a picture of Elihu Root; 430 did not know who U. C. Wells is."

The secretary wants to know what it means. It ought not to be hard to tell him. People know well only things in which they are directly interested. The same questions asked of any group of average adults would probably bring answers not much more valuable. John Smith, merchant, devotes his intensive delving for knowledge to the state of the market in cotton goods or fancy groceries. Henry Jones, lawyer, reads up on the supreme court decisions. Because their brains have been soaked for a longer time than the high school students in the solution of great names and events which make up the daily news, probably Smith and Jones could tell a bit more, on the average, about U. C. Wells or the "open shop." But the information has probably stuck to their minds more or less by dint of constant repetition rather than through any conscious effort of will or purposeful study. High school folks are just like the rest of us, and will end up as grown-ups with about the same mental stock-in-trade, mind for mind, as the rest of us have about things that are no direct concern of ours.

It is too bad that it is so, perhaps, but it is so. The average head can only hold a certain amount, it seems, and it naturally sorts out from its impressions those that are most likely to be useful in its daily needs. We should say, off-hand, that a fair deduction from the two tests would be that high school students are more devoted than is ordinarily supposed to Caesar, geometry and English. At least, while one could wish they were more deeply versed in current history, it is re-assuring that they are not more thoroughly steeped in baseball, football and the movies. Their present business is acquiring the groundwork of mental training necessary for dealing with life. It is, perhaps, a good sign that there is not so much else in their heads as one might think.

La Follette and the League

SOME six weeks ago the Tribune and Leader-Press predicted that political forces preparing to make the Nonpartisan league an issue in the 1922 campaign would find that, like the Arab, the foe had folded its tents and stolen silently away. We pointed out that in view of North Dakota history the logical strategy of the league might well be to abandon participation in politics through candidates of its own choosing, and to work rather through endorsement of candidates chosen by regular political parties upon whom Nonpartisan influence could best be brought to bear as a highway to legislative actions.

That is exactly the import of a recent announcement by Townley, chief architect of Nonpartisanism. He proposes now an economic Nonpartisan league that will seek to give effect to its plans by exacting pledges from candidates of the old parties by means of the votes which the league can control.

Two years ago the Tribune and Leader-Press prophesied that the Nonpartisan league would be used by Senator La Follette for his political purposes, but that he would not permit it to dictate to him what policies and legislative programs should be supported. This seemed obvious. Whatever may be said of him, La Follette requires in his measures, no matter how extreme they may be, the element of practicability. The thing that is done must be workable, so that it will not return as a failure to reproach the senator's record. It seemed plain that he would not permit his label to be stamped upon a program largely theoretical and the success of which must at best be a political hazard.

The history of the present state administration bears out this prophecy. However they may have sympathized with its intent, the La Follette forces in this state dare not embody the Nonpartisan program in state legislation for which it would have been responsible.

And so it was that some two years ago we predicted that Senator La Follette would either absorb the Nonpartisan league, or discard it. Evidences of some such purpose are abundant. New farm organizations are proposed under circumstances indicating that they are expected to be quite as useful to the La Follette organization as was the Nonpartisan league, but neither burdensome nor tyrannical in the price they would ask for this allegiance. With Senator La Follette this had to be so. It is not in him to brook dictation or to share leadership, and he is far too shrewd to accept responsibility for the unrestricted adoption of whatever theories might have pleased the fancy of socialist carpet-baggers who have assumed farm leadership in this state.

Notwithstanding these circumstances, Wisconsin Nonpartisans are preparing to give reluctant support to the La Follette organization in the coming campaign. They regard this as the least of the evils that may befall them. While they are far from satisfied, they will probably go through with it. A new campaign for membership is opening up, and a sturdy effort to increase enrollment will be made at bargain prices.

Let us now record another prediction. It is that the Nonpartisans will again have their troubles for their pains. The La Follette organization will take their votes. It will again agree with them "in principle." But it will get no legislation that does not meet with the approval of Senator La Follette, and it cannot be expected that the senator's seasoned judgment will approve the lock, stock and barrel of any communistic program.

Skirts

WILL women do anything fashion decrees? Not this time, apparently. Style creators are trying to bring the long skirt back. Are women taking to it? About as much as asbestos burns and cork sinks. "Skirts next summer are going to be so short, the flappers won't be able to roll their hose," says a model at a Chicago exhibit of women's wearing apparel. Sad situation for textile trades. Long skirts can be shortened. Short skirts can't be lengthened.

Joseph Kubitzki, employed by the Northwestern Railroad company in this city, has served notice on all the railroads running through the city that they must not use a shovel like the one on which he has secured a patent. The shovel in question is one used for cleaning accumulations from grooves at crossings. It has been used for years and no one has ever thought of taking out a patent for it. Mr. Kubitzki thought it would be a good scheme to get a patent on the shovel. He applied for one and got it. Now he offers to sell it for $10,000.

The Girl in Red

BY LAURA IRISH MONTGOMERY

In past years when Irene had finished a picture she had used to rush downstairs and show her family what she had done. But as she grew older she had learned to dread the laughter that sometimes greeted her. Her people loved color. Having this, bizarre arrangements of color combinations that no one else had dared, fascinated her. She had been submitting cover designs to the magazines for years, but, as her brothers jokingly informed her, she had yet to make a single sale. Her parents were exceedingly costly. The colors she used were invariably the most expensive.

"If you'd spend your allowance on your clothes, instead of paints, you'd look a lot better," observed Fred, staring at the paint-stained frock and muddy hair.

Irene looked from the startling picture in her hand to her brother's face. "Don't you like it a little?" she inquired, a somewhat beaten expression creeping into her eyes.

Fred, thinking she had dropped from him. This was the first time Irene had ever looked at him as though she thought of him as a person. "I'll tell you, Irene," he began seriously, "you are too unsteady. No one can share at one thing the way you do and do the best work. If you devoted even five hours a day to your painting and the rest to preparation, getting fresh viewpoints and becoming rested, you would do a lot better. I think you have talent, but I don't believe you'd ever in this world make good the way you're rushing at it. You have to be a bit all-around to get the best out of life, you know."

"Then you don't think this really necessary?" she pushed back a wisp of curly black hair and her hand fell to a smear of violent blue paint near her left eye which failed to improve her appearance.

Annoyed by her unkempt look and trembling mouth, Fred scowled. "No, it looks like a crazy person had painted it. I suppose you are not going to honor us by attending the dance at the country club?"

Irene stared down at her picture and then rushed from the room. "No, body cares," she wept when she had reached her room, that was replete with ancient pictures.

Freddie tapped at the door and then pushed it open. She carried a cup of tea, and the very sight of the fruit blue china and the tiny sandwiches refreshed Irene. "Sister, Irene," remarked the younger sister sensibly, "think this and slip into an evening frock and come with us. I believe Fred is right, although he is such a crank; if you go about a bit and eat properly, you'll go back to work better than now."

Irene pushed back her hair a second time, and Daisy began to laugh as the scowl decorated the girl's face. "I am too tired to dress," she began, but her sister interrupted her. "Think this over and take your time in dressing. We're not going until half past eight o'clock and you'll have plenty of time."

Fred stared as he saw Irene sitting down the white black ink smudge. She certainly looked like a different girl. Her eyes had left no traces save a flash on either cheek that was becoming. Her black hair was caught up in a curly knot on the top of her head and she had secured it with an old carved black comb with a high top. The frock was an old one. Irene wasted little time on shopping—but it was vastly becoming. A vivid red chiffon that brought out the soft black of her velvety eyes. "Oh, sis, you look like some body new," declared Fred. "You know how to dress yourself if you put dress your impossible staid-looking maidens. You've screwed his eyes up as though inspecting a picture. 'Think something, think. Have you a black fan?'"

Irene, refreshed by the delicious tea, giggled. "Nothing so hand; anyone would think of a black fan because my eyes are dark. See?" and she brought her left hand, which had been behind her, out with a flourish. The huge feather fan of brilliant blue gave a touch of the bizarre to her costume that was exquisite. Fred hated to be offensive, but he really admired his sister at that moment. She looked so tender and feminine, with her curly hair about her face. "If you painted a picture of that staircase with a pretty girl coming down in that dress it might not be so bad," he said slowly.

All evening Fred's words lingered in the girl's mind. He seldom praised his sister, and his words gave her an idea. If she stopped trying so earnestly for something different, if she painted what she knew, she might achieve something. She had been trying to do things that no one understood, and no one had paused to try to understand her meaning in the impossible pictures she had shown upon. "Why is that girl in red?" she overheard a stranger ask.

"She is an artist, and I never knew until tonight that she was a real girl," rejoined Richard Gieg, a man whom Irene had known for years and secretly admired. He was a man who

ONE REEL YARNS

BERTHA'S SPEECH

The Adolphian Literary Society had just met for its regular Friday afternoon program. New officers for the coming term were to be elected. Bertha, sitting in the rear of the meeting room, tried not to look important. She felt sure she would be elected the new president. All the girls had been talking about it. The chairman not to read the names of the candidates. "Name the names," Bertha longed for president. She was just the same as elected. No one would vote for Jane. The new officers would be installed at the next meeting and then she would have to make her inaugural address. She decided she would work hard and think up a really good speech. Usually the girls were so scared they just stammered something about appreciating the honor thrust upon them and sat down. Bertha smiled superiorly. She would not let her college sister help her write a really wonderful speech. The votes were being gathered and the chairman, "We have decided because of the coming vacation to install the new officers to-night."

Bertha scarcely heard. She was picturing herself standing before the society next Friday afternoon in her new silk dress, smiling and addressing them. "Members of Adolphian Literary Society, and friends—"

"The new officers will please come forward to be installed," the chairman continued some moments later after the votes had been counted. Bertha, who, true to her expectation, had been elected president, walked from her elected position, smiling and dully she went forward with the others. Her mind was perfectly blank as the constitution was being read. Then the other girls took their places and the society waited expectantly, all eyes on her. Her tongue stuck to the roof of her mouth. Her hands were appalled in the back of the room. It was only her knees beating together. It seemed that she had stood there an hour before her voice would come. She just said something.

"I appreciate—" she began in a shaky voice. "Oh, what was it that she appreciated?" "I appreciate," her voice trembled more than ever. "Oh, yes! Now she had to appreciate this honor that had been thrust upon me."

Near the Truth
Friedrich: "Oh, what an awful fear you have on your forehead."
Sophie (modestly): "Next to nothing—next to nothing."

Richard later when he had read the wonderful letter from the art editor, "and the sketch of the vivid red gown with the daring blue feather fan, evidently made a hit. I don't know, however, that I can spare any of my wife's time for art, though," he added with the masterful air that Irene adored.

The change from the paint-laden air to the summer, flower-scented breeze and the recreation of the successful evening did Irene worlds of good. Moreover, her ideas had freshened and she went to work with a steady hand.

As she sketched in the outlines for a new cover her lips curved happily. After all, it was a pleasant thing to be a girl and wear pretty clothes.

She worked steadily until noon and then went for a walk before lunch. At three o'clock she had finished her sketch, which she had done in long the deathly among such birds-water colors to get the first effect.

A week later she was waiting in the hall for Daisy, who was trying to effect the effect of a new hat that Irene had, with her new interest in clothes, designed for her sister, when the postman rang.

Irene sat reading the short note from the art editor, her eyes round with surprise. "He says, Daisy, that this sketch is the first thing that I've sent in that had any promise, and that if I keep on doing every-day sketches, I may send him something he can accept."

Daisy giggled. "Art is very nice; you sure designed a peachy hat for me, sis, but if I had a chance at a man like Richard Gieg, who?" she had caught a glimpse of a gray overcoat outside the hall door, "is coming up this very minute, I'd never waste a second on art."

"The girl in red showed me a girl I had never known before," teased

TO-DAY'S PUZZLE

Each blank of the following sentence may be filled with the same letters arranged to form different words:
"They roped off an — to make room for the —"

Answer to yesterday's: Table, cat, Tuesday, year, rat.

WHERE DAYS BEGIN

Did you know it is possible to live in two years at once? A man brims down on a ship as it crosses the Date Line at the dawn of a new year can quite easily have one-half of his body in one year and the other half in the other year.

But maybe you don't know about the Date Line. This is an imaginary line on the other side of the earth, which has been agreed upon by man as the place where each day shall begin.

In order to keep people from getting time mixed up, it is as far as possible from the horns of men. The line lies along the 180th meridian, but does not follow it closely. It turns to the East, so as to include the East Cape Peninsula with Siberia. Then it turns to the West to include the Aleutian Islands and the group of islands towards Hawaii, which belong to the United States and should have the same day. Then, on the south of the equator, it turns again to the East.

The captain of a ship steaming from America to Asia, when he reaches the Date Line advances his clock or calendar twenty-four hours. Thus his time agrees with that in the Eastern Hemisphere. When a ship is going the other way, from West to East, the captain puts back the calendar twenty-four hours.

In this way, a ship sailing east may have two New Year's Days, or Christmas, or Fourth of July, if it crosses the Date Line at the beginning of one of these days, but a ship sailing westward might not get any holiday at all.

About Knives and Forks

Back in A.D. times it was considered "fine thing" to eat with the knife, even after forks were invented, for the first forks had only two prongs. Now knives are used as little as possible. Forks are used for potatoes and most other vegetables, for fish and for salad, without the help of the knife. Olives, radishes and celery may be taken up with the fingers.

The Right Answer

"Now, Harold," said the teacher, "if you had twelve marbles and Frank took four of them, what would that make?"

"A fight," was the prompt reply.

He Was Worried

"All who want to go to heaven please rise," said the Sunday school superintendent.
All rose except Johnny.
"Don't you want to go, Johnny?" he asked in surprise.
"Not yet."

STUDENT COMMITTEE PROPOSES CHANGE IN ACCOUNTING COURSE

Finds that Proper Attention is Not Being Given Students; Many Failures Result

MADISON, Wis.—Report made Wednesday night by a student senate committee investigating the university accounting course 181, showed that practically all students were of the opinion that the course resulted in an excess of fails, that a military attitude was maintained by the instructors and that too little consideration was given students.

The committee after going into charges of the Daily Cardinal, student publication, that nearly half of the students in the course had been failed and that an intolerant attitude was maintained by the department, came to the conclusion that there were improper facilities for conducting the course, and recommended changes in the curriculum.

They said that with existing facilities, instructors were overworked and as a result were unable to give proper attention to all of the students.

RUM RUNNERS OF PUGET SOUND USING U-BOAT IS BELIEF

Mysterious Submarine in Borders Thought Property of Liquor Ring

BY PHILIP L. SINNOTT. SEATTLE, Wash.—Search of officials here is centered on locating and raising down a mysterious submarine that has been operating in Puget Sound.

The U-boat is believed to be in the service of the formidably founded and financed bootlegging ring that has been flooding the entire northwest with Canadian liquor smuggled into the country by way of Puget Sound.

New reports of the U-boat bob up every day. Authorities publicly deny and ridicule them—and give attention to combating such a menace. They declare it is impossible—and watch with suspicion every bit of floatism encountered in the sound.

"Absurd—a submarine needs a big technical crew," declare officials. And government boats meanwhile are being fitted out with one-pounder guns. Appeals have been made for fast patrol boats, equipped with rapid fire guns.

Today a farmer tells officials of a strange looking craft unloading liquor in an obscure cove; tomorrow someone else not only saw the boat but talked with a member of the crew in an obscure channel. Next perhaps, Indians at some distant point saw the strange craft, thought it was a wrecked schooner and tried to salvage it.

U-Boat Built for Government? Although government officials decline to discuss it, a check has been asked, it is said, of all submarines built for the government on the west coast during the war. Some of these, are believed to have been sold to outsiders after the sudden cessation of ship building activities.

Liquor is flowing into Washington via Puget Sound in such quantities today that the price is far below that in other sections. And these prices are constantly declining.

Federal dry forces, customs officials and local forces are working zealous and are making big seizures, but cannot make enough headway even to cause a price fluctuation. No Canadian law prohibits or penalizes export of liquor. Bootleggers are entirely unhampered in securing supplies.

Spies on Officials. American agents seek to check up on these supplies and report them to patrol vessels. A transfer in mainstream from onward bound vessels to bootleggers' fast craft, a dash toward the American line with modified exhaust, a flit through a possible hiding place for a cutter or a period of hiding in a sequestered spot—and more liquor flows into dry America.

Puget Sound bootleggers are well organized. An intelligence system that watches the authorities, an advantage in having superior, speedier boats and capable navigators are all factors.

Although all law-enforcing agencies are centering efforts on halting the practice, they are greatly handicapped. Interpretation of the prohibition laws in Washington courts has judged the officers with so many restrictions that they repeatedly have to release persons they find with liquor. A pushed booze boat can throw its

MANY STRAY DOGS IN CHICAGO SENT TO COUNTRY HOMES

Anti-Cruelty Society Does Good Work in Caring for Homeless Animals

CHICAGO—Many of Chicago's stray dogs of the streets, unhappy and sometimes dangerous in a friendless environment, were placed on farms throughout Illinois last year by the Anti-Cruelty Society, John J. Abbott, its president, told the society's annual meeting here recently. The demand for dogs he said, was greater than the society could fill.

Three coyotes also found homes through the society last year, he added. Dogs passing through its refuge in 1921, numbered 2,752 and cats 2,548.

A notable feature of 1921 was the humane day held in the public schools. Mr. Abbott continued. "With the cooperation of Superintendent of Schools Mortenson we arranged for a humane day when special exercises urging kindness to animals were held in every room of every school in Chicago," he said.

Mr. Abbott is one of Chicago's leading bankers. He is the man who negotiated a $5,000,000 loan to China.

Alkali in Soap Bad For the Hair.

Soap should be used very carefully. If you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Multistat coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls of Multistat will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multistat coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Multistat.

WESTBY CITY TEAM DEFEATS Y. M. C. A. IN CONTEST HERE

Second Defeat Suffered by Local Quintet at Hands of Westby

The Westby city basketball team defeated the local Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening to score a second victory this season over the "Y" aggregation. The score was 20 to 21. The Y. M. C. A. was beaten by the Westby losers earlier in the season on their home floor.

With both teams displaying high class brand of basketball, fans expressed their belief that the contest was one of the best exhibitions seen on the local floor this year. While the visiting aggregation held the scoring edge throughout the game, spurts and flashes of speed on the part of the "Y" men at times seemed destined to place them out in front time and again.

Moore, left forward for the home team, was credited with being the individual star for the locals, giving a fine exhibition of floor work and in addition registering 16 of the 21 points garnered by his team. B. Johnson, for Westby, displayed rare ability in both shooting and floor work, ending 17 out of the 30 points.

The visitors led at the end of the first period by a margin of 6 points, the count being 16 to 10. Tightening up in the final frame the locals fought the visitors to a tie, each team netting 14 points. It was considered one of the best games seen on the "Y" floor this year.

CAMPION COLLEGE BEATS UPPER IOWA

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis.—The Champion college basketball aggregation defeated the upper Iowa university five Wednesday night by a score of 17 to 15.

There is a punner on third and one man out. The batter hits a grounder to the shortstop. The runner on third makes an attempt to go home. The pitcher catches the ball and checks for the plate as the ball was hit. The shortstop became confused and thinking it was the runner trying for home, made the play to the plate. The batter was with getting past the catcher and rolling to the grandstand. The ball now enabled the runner on third to cross and the batter to reach second. What is the proper ruling on such a play?

The runner on third who scored, should have been called out for interference on the part of the catcher, which resulted in the shortstop making a hurried throw to the plate that went wild. The batter, who reached second on the play, should have been sent back to first.

Curling Club Puts On Initial Demonstration In New Building Friday

With predictions of colder weather for Friday fulfilled, the La Crosse curling club will stage its initial demonstration in the recently completed curling shed here Friday evening.

The new building, constructed immediately to the rear of the Wisconsin Pearl Button company in North Third street, represents the first work in modern construction of curling sheds and has been placed in readiness for the grand opening night. The building is 170 feet by 40 feet in dimensions, with conveniences for both participants and spectators alike.

An observation room, capable of seating in the neighborhood of fifty spectators has been arranged in the forepart of the building, partitioned off from the curling department by glass, insuring comfortable quarters for the on-lookers, who will witness the contests through the glass partition. Through this arrangement it is possible to heat the spectators' gallery without harming the ice surface in the curling room.

At the opening and trial of the curling shed this evening it is planned to have only local curlers participating. However, it is expected that within a short time, Calvesville and other rinks will be brought here for competition with local knights of the famous Scotch game.

Recently Organized

The local curling club was organized during the work of the winter carnival and has come to represent a permanent fixture among the sporting clubs in the city. The new organization will be welcomed among those interested in the sport. Shortly following organization of the club, fifty curling enthusiasts in the city became members and from the interest shown it is easily to be expected that as many more will be placed on the membership roll before the end of the season.

Anyone interested and those who wish to acquaint themselves with the sport are invited to witness the curling at the rink to-night.

SLOW BALL GREAT AID TO PITCHER

Walter Johnson Says He Regrets He Didn't Master Change of Pace Early in His Career

BY WALTER JOHNSON

Can a pitcher prolong his career, if at the very outset, he develops a slow ball and a change of pace?

I am positive a change of pace will prove most beneficial to any pitcher. Not only will it tend to prolong his career but it will make his task of winning ball games much easier.

I am sorry that I didn't try to master a slow ball earlier in my career. Some pitchers take naturally to the throwing of a slow ball.

It is a matter of record, that pitchers using a very fast ball have always had more or less difficulty mastering the slow ball.

I am at a loss to account for such a condition, unless it is because the spin on the ball is much different in throwing the fast or slow ball.

I have spent much time of late trying to perfect a slow ball, but have done with only fair success.

CHARLES H. WEECHMAN ELOPES ON WEDNESDAY WITH A CHICAGO GIRL

Former Owner of Cubs Quietly Married at East St. Louis

CHICAGO.—Charles H. Weechman, former owner of the Chicago National League baseball club and well known man about town, was married Wednesday in East St. Louis, Ill., to Miss Carol Osmond, a Chicago woman. A justice of the peace performed the ceremony and they left the town in an automobile.

The news of the wedding came last night as a surprise to friends in Chicago. News of the marriage came in a telegram to a newspaper.

43 and 29
Mr. Weechman gave his address as Lake Zurich, Ill., and his age as 43. Miss Osmond said she was 29 years old.

Both Mr. Weechman and his wife have figured in publicity's spotlight. He gained renown first for his string of "sage arm" restaurants in the loop.

When the Federal League broke in on organized baseball, he took up the reins of the Chicago "Feds" and worried the captains of the two big leagues so much that they finally closed down the "Feds" by buying the players, grounds, and stock. Weechman then became president of the Chicago National League team and moved the Cubs from the west side to their present home on the north side.

The Tribune Newsboy Tossers defeated the Bethel Lutheran team 22-20 at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening. The game was a thriller from start to finish. The first half ended in a tie 12-12. The Bethel Lutheran's led until the last three minutes of the game then the T. N. T.'s tied the score. As the score was a tie at the end of the game, ten minutes extra was allowed to decide the winner. H. C. Lew led the scoring for the T. N. T. and O. Olson for the Bethel Lutherans.

HARDEST GAME OF SEASON EXPECTED FRIDAY NIGHT WITH MADISON TEAM HERE

High School Athletic Council Installs Extra Bleachers to Accommodate One Thousand Spectators

THE Red and Black will enter into their hardest game of the season Friday night at 8 o'clock in the Hixon gym, when they face the fastest team Madison has produced in years. Without a doubt, this game will be a "tail-wagger" from start to finish, enough to excite interest in the dearest sports-follower of the city.

In order to accommodate, which is expected, the largest crowd of spectators that will fill the Hixon gym this season, the athletic council of the high school has secured bleachers to be put in the balcony and on the lower floor so as to seat one thousand people. This is being especially done for the Madison game, so that a large crowd may attend and be comfortable.

Star Team
Little needs to be said concerning the strength of Madison, who last week defeated the powerful Stoughton quintet 34 to 8. Madison this year features Bud Walsch, considered by many as the best high school basketball guard in the state. They also boast a clever man "Tailard," an important member of the Madison tossing machine. He works very effectively on the floor and has a wonderful eye for the basket. On the whole, Madison presents the speediest team of many seasons.

This is the proposition the local high has to meet Friday night. It will absolutely be the best game played in the Hixon gym this year as La Crosse has always had a bitter rivalry in Madison. Every sports-follower of the city will find it worth the time to witness this game and cheer on the old La Crosse high, which is represented by Coach Keegan's warlike squad. There will be plenty of seats for all, so come on, let's go.

The contesting teams were the Charlotte, N. C., team at the South Atlantic League and the Winston-Salem team of the Piedmont League.

The Charlotte club scored four runs on four balls pitched. The first three batters singled on the first ball pitched to them. None of the singles were hard hits, so the three safe swats merely filled the bases.

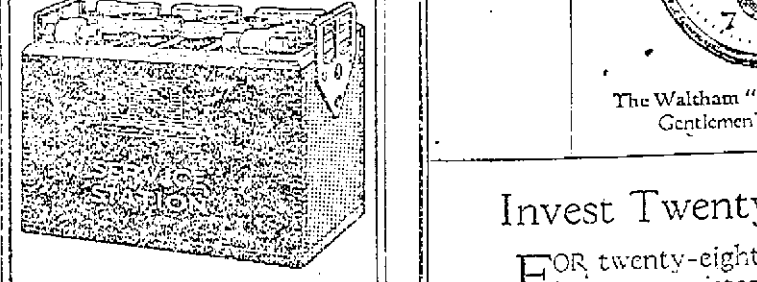

Then came Shortstop O'Connell to the bat with the stage all set. While not a hard hitter as a rule, O'Connell belted on the first ball pitched for a home run, clearing the bases.

Thus in one inning on four balls pitched the Charlotte club, through the medium of three singles and a home run, scored four runs. That is a record for some of the slugging aggregations to shoot at.

Rolls Total of 694 in Commercial League Games at Lotus Wednesday Evening

Rolling in official games of the commercial bowling league at the Lotus alleys Wednesday evening, Adrian Fuchs, of the Tribune firm, placed second in the Lotus alley records for high total with a count of 694.

William Bonadurer, rolling with the Biks last year holds the alley record for official league games with a total of 709. Fuchs' 694, however, is the high total for this season in league games. His 278 in the first game last evening fell one short of being the high single score this year of Edward Horn.

The Tribune and Leader Press team won three games from the Biks' Jo's.

The Stamping and Tool, National Chicago and Montague teams won two out of three from the Weavers, Auto Supply and Tag Harts Wednesday evening. The scores:

TIME FOR FARMERS TO ORGANIZE THEIR BUSINESS IS NOW

Must Not Wait Until Forced to do So for Self-Protection Declares Official

SAGINAW, Mich.—The big question facing American farmers is whether they will grasp the opportunity to organize their business on a cooperative basis or wait until they have been pushed down to the existence of a peasant of Siberian Russia thirty years ago, and find co-operation necessary for self-protection. E. B. Heaton, director of dairy marketing of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the Michigan allied dairy association here Thursday.

Co-operative organizations in the dairy business have developed to a greater extent abroad than in this country, Mr. Heaton said, and the individual American dairyman may soon be called on to compete with his highly organized foreign associates. Russia he said has about as many co-operative creameries as the United States and had attempted federation of co-operative creameries long before such a thing was thought of in this country.

Co-operative cheese factories, the second branch of the dairy business to organize, has much development work to do, Mr. Heaton said, while the co-operative milk producers associations, last to be formed, are still fighting an organized opposition, with varying degrees of success.

Many farmers, he declared, have failed to realize the importance of working capital in business, and have handicapped their co-operative efforts with insufficient funds. Farmers also fail to realize that an immediate return is not always possible because the co-operative selling agency must finance the products collected until they are marketed.

"CLASS AND SASS" IS BILLING OF LEADERS IN MAJESTIC PROGRAM

"Class and Sass" is the billing of Mack Hanley and Fritzie Howard, who will entertain Majestic patrons for the rest of the week along with four other high grade vaudeville acts. Hanley is a wholesome, good-looking young chap, possessing a pleasing singing voice, an excellent comedian and a jokersmith out of the ordinary. Fritzie Howard, his clever partner, is a charmingly witty and gracefully attractive young comedienne who sings, well, knows how to display striking costumes and figure, and astonishes out with her ability for repartee. They have a decidedly different musical offering, consisting of songs and patter. There is a joyfulness and freshness to their songs that is most refreshing, these partners are of that snappy, breezy, mirth provoking kind so hilariously entertaining and their stage play actually scintillated happiness.

Other acts on the bill are Stein and Smyth, "Brazilian Diplomats"; Du Bois he Jougler, the Four Camerons and Rinaldo Bros.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Menthol-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant, cool cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eruptions, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly soothes the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eruptions right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or soreness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Menthol-Sulphur at any drug store.

BOOST NORMANNA

Editor, Tribune: It strikes me as I read in your valuable paper the announcement of the Normanna Sausage contest that these men are entitled to our support and encouragement. This organization is composed of men in all callings of life and in a wide difference in ages and undoubtedly of various views, but even to forget all these things and in an unselfish delight give their time, money and efforts to learn and give only to themselves but to all of us a different view on life. A view that leads us to a better fellowship and gives us a wonderful rest and uplift in body and soul. When the Normanna Sausage contest and are going to accept the program that they are in a position to know what expense and work these men have to go through to make these men have a big undertaking, let us assist them in a modest way, so that they attend a sausage festival at Sioux City, Iowa, next year. They can feel that they are not only representing themselves, but the whole city of La Crosse. This festival will have representatives from all over the country and will be attended by a thousand to two thousand people.

The Tribune and Leader Press music critic certainly has the understanding and thoughtful of aid for an organization of this kind. Prof. Cotton and Superintendent McCormick's remarks at the 52nd anniversary of the Normanna also told the significance of work of this kind in our community.

It would be interesting to hear opinions from our public spirited people on this subject.

A Believer in Our Community.

ANSWER

Editor, Tribune:

M. P. Marx: In regard to your letter on the front page of the Sunday edition in the La Crosse Tribune I will say that our Chamber of Commerce has no direct involvement and I hope some day we can show you one of the busiest towns in the United States. Of course if you think so much of La Crosse the way she stands why don't you move in as I think we have room for another member in the Unity League. Sure if we get our pockets full why worry about the rest. Yours truly,

FAMOUS ILLINOIS JURIST DEAD

JACKSONVILLE, Wis.—Thomas Worthington, 72, former state representative and county judge and one of the most widely known drainage district lawyers in the central west, died at his home here Wednesday at noon. He was prominent in public affairs here and in years past was frequently associated with former President Harrison in drainage legislation in Indiana.

The Hero in Verse "I have a little something here in the way of a poem," began the editor apologetically.

"I'll look it over," said the editor. "Much obliged, I'm sure."

One Reason Why CASCARA & QUININE Acts On The Spot

ELLIS C. B. Q. Tablets are best by test. Try this simple experiment:

1. Drop a C. B. Q. Tablet in a glass of clear water.

2. Instantly the tablet begins disintegrating or "breaks up."

3. In 10 seconds the medical properties are thoroughly mixed with water.

Thus, Ellis C. B. Q. Tablets act immediately, give relief without delay and begin checking Colds and La Grippe long before ordinary tablets, by actual test, are absorbed by the stomach juices. To prove this, subject other than C. B. Q. Tablets to the test, and observe that in most instances an hour or more is required for complete disintegration.

FAMILY TRAVELS IN HOUSE ON BOBBLED TO KILBOURNE HOME

RUSHFORD, Minn.—Traveling in a board-and-bench, canvas-topped little room, made to fit a regulation-size job, a family of four children stepped in this city yesterday, enroute from their former home in Chadfield, Minn., to seek a new home in Kilbourne, Wis.

The family was cooked upon a cookstove in the so-called house; the stove being run on kerosene. The family slept in the open enclosure, also, and depended upon their wits in the various rooms through which they passed, for their purchases of food for the stove and eggs, milk, etc., for their meals. The youngest child was just one year old, the oldest about eight years.

The father expected to make Kilbourne in the next two days. Following their night's stay here and stated that they had already been four days upon the road. A few pieces of furniture and the family's personal effects were carried with them.

Maestros—Comedy, "The Life of Jesse James," Charlie Chaplin comedy.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN—MAJESTIC

Elaine Hammerstein has found the happiest of light comedy roles in "The Way of a Maid," which begins at the Majestic theater for a three-day run today.

This captivating tale of a young society heiress, who, without father or mother to advise her, mischievously plays the role of a lady's maid to her confusion and embarrassment, offers Miss Hammerstein every kind of hilarious opportunity.

Seen in the funny dress costume of a maid by a tipsy young millionaire, who takes her for the part, Nadia Castellan is tempted into the compromising position of accepting his attentions. In fact she poses as her own maid, Marie. Unfortunately, young Tom Lawlor is in earnest. Complications develop fast. And when Nadia's fiancée falls suddenly away from her hand at this juncture, the nearest avenue of escape for her seems abruptly.

Tight in the grip of circumstances, she yields further to the spirit of adventure. The Lawlors having come out to climb the social ladder, have need of a country hunt. Nadia is for real. Mrs. Lawlor bases it. Then, waiting a companion to instruct her in the intricacies of social form, she engages Nadia through her son Tom. The family moves to the Castellan summer home. Here situations follow situation in exciting rapidity, until the car finally escapes the log.

"The Way of a Maid" is capital entertainment. It is action every minute, with a compelling twist presented at each step in its development.

Agnes Ayres was elevated to stardom by Paramount while working as leading woman with Thomas Meighan in "Cappy Ricks," a compilation of Peter B. Kyne's breezy stories of the sea, which will be shown at the Rivoli theater the part of the week.

The company directed by Tom Forman spent some time on the Maine coast off which the week scenes were made. After returning from the seashore Miss Ayres received instructions to report in Hollywood to begin her first picture as a star.

The historic state pier in South Boston was chosen for several scenes of "Cappy Ricks." It was the exact

KING TO GIVE AWAY PRINCESS MARY IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY

Princess Mary and three views in Westminster Abbey, where she will be married.

BY MILTON BRONNER
LONDON—Westminster Abbey, the greatest and one of the oldest shrines in all Britain, is to be the scene of the wedding of Princess Mary, daughter of the sovereigns of England, to Viscount Lascelles. And already the sounds of the hammer and the saw are to be heard where usually there is the hushing of the choir and the thunder of the organ.

For the first time in 640 years the abbey is to be the scene of the wedding of a child of the British sovereigns. In that time more history has taken place in this wonderful building than in any other in the world.

Kings have been wedded, crowned and buried here. Many of the greatest captains that ever led British armies and many of the greatest poets have found a last resting place here. The abbey is the last resting place of Britain's Unknown Soldier who fell in the great war.

Large as the church is its seating capacity for a great event is comparatively limited.

Rush for Tickets
The princess bride expects to enter by the great west door and walk down the entire length of the great nave. Therefore carpenters are now at work erecting platforms in the nave where some two thousand invited guests will be seated.

The scramble for tickets to these places has already started and thousands who think they ought to get places will be bitterly disappointed. The church will be reserved for the members of the royal family and the representatives of foreign powers, among whom will be the ambassador, George Harvey. The chairs on which all the guests will sit will be brought from Buckingham Palace.

King to Give Daughter
No seat will be provided for King George, as he has announced his intention of giving his daughter away in person. He will therefore ascend her down the nave to the altar and stand beside her until the time comes to hand her over to the bridegroom.

As a show it will probably be the most gorgeous London has seen since the coronation of the king. The coronation of King George V. in 1911 was a magnificent occasion and will be a magnificent occasion.

AN OLD ROMAN FORT

As the work of excavating the site of the Roman fort on the Scarborough Castle Hill, England, proceeds, evidence of medieval remains are being brought to light. The level at which the Roman remains exist has not yet been reached, though a trench has just been commenced with the definite object of locating one of the walls of the center tower. Remains of the medieval church are in evidence, and from some of the recent finds it appears quite possible that a more modern dwelling-house of which there is no record in any of the local histories, probably stood on the site of the fort after medieval times. The finds include pieces of old tobacco pipes, and a quantity of pottery of various shapes such as it is unlikely would be found in connection with the church. Fragments of stained glass from the church windows, and also some colored glass tiles, which probably formed the interior, have been discovered. Certain foundations have been found which belong either to the church or the supposed house. Recently three coins, two of silver and one of copper, apparently of the 14th or 15th century, were found.

My examinations show that a lot of the supposed works of old masters are fakes. We might add that a majority of the real works of the old masters are fakes, also.
